THE TALKING DOLLS. they Would Be More Entertaining We Could Understand What They

Say. The talking dolls have come to town. Six dollars and ninety-eight cents apiece is dirt cheap for such conversa-tional powers as theirs. For entrails they have small phonographs, and to make them speak you have only to turn a crank connecting with their spinal columns. Something of a monotony there is about their speech, for each has only to say for itself a single short nursery poem, though it will repeat that as often as may be desired. Six of the speaking doll babies were sated in a row yesterday afternoon in a down-town shop. Their remarks, were listened to by an audience con-sisting, at the moment when the Star reporter looked in, of one freckled-faced boy, two giggling young women, who were dressed precisely alike for the purpose of exhibiting the fact that they were twing one consumpting they were twins; one consumptive youth, with a preter-naturally high collar, a fat woman, an old man with a beard like a goat, and a door-mat poodle that was evidently the property of some one in the party. Behind the counter was a pretty girl with frizzed hair and a coquettish ribbon at the throat, whose business it seemed to be to keep on grinding out talk from the dolls one after another.

The first one was labeled: "Talking Doil No. 1." It had a placard of considerable size fastened beneath its chin, which said—not the chin but the pla-card—that this doll recited "Old Mother Hubbard." When the pretty girl turned the crank, the doll said with great distinctness:

THE PARROT AND THE HEN. How Polly Got into Mischief and The

Our next door neighbor, writes a correspondent of Munson's World, owns an amusing parrot which is always get-ting into mischief, but usually gets out again without much trouble to her-self. When she does anything for which she knows she ought to be pun-ished she holds her head to one side and, eying her mistress, says in a sing song tone: "Polly is a good girl, until she sees her mistress smile; the she flaps her wings and cries out. "Hurrah Polly is a good girl!" She has been allowed to go free in the garden, where she promenades back and forth on the walks, sunning herself and warning off all intruders.

One morning a hen strayed out of the chicken yard and was quietly picking up her breakfast, when Polimarched up to her and called out "Shoo!" in her shrill voice. The poor warning off all intruders. hen retreated to her own quarters, running as fast as she could, followed by Poll, who screamed "Shoo!" at every

A few days later Poll extended her walk into the chicken-yard. Here, with her usual curiosity, she went peering into every corner, till she came to the old hen on her nest. The hen made a dive for Poll's yellow head, but missed it. Poll, thinking discretion the better part of valor, turned to run, the better part of valor, turned to run, the hen, with wings wide spread, following close after.

While English bank directors are forbidding their clerks to marry on a less salary than $750 the financiers of tess salary than $750 the financiers of Vienua are pursuing a policy which is the very reverse. They are dismissing all their single employes and retaining only those who are married, their idea being that a clerk who has a family dependent upon him is less likely to go wrong than one who has not.

A young farmer at Morland, Pa., has named his cows after his various sweet-bearts. Although he has a large herd be found names enough to go round. MEERSCHAUM IN CHUNKS.

NO. 37.

Comes From Turkey, and is Chiefly Used for Pipes.

The meerschaum comes from Turkey in boxes. A box holds about fifty pounds, and is worth from $20 to $300, pounds, and is worth from $20 to $306, according to the size and quality of the pieces. It looks like plaster of paris smoothed off and rounded. The amber looks like beeswax or large pieces of resin. It comes in pieces, and is worth from $2 to $20 a pound. Meerschaum to make a five-dollar pipe costs about $2.50. The amber tips raw costs about one-quarter or one-half as much.

When an order comes for a pipe the proprietor goes through the stock of meerschaum to get a piece out of meerschaum to get a piece out of which the pipe can be cut with as little loss as possible. Four-fifths of the meerschaum is wasted, though the chips are often saved and made into imitation meerschaum pipes.

The meerschaum is first cut on a circular saw into a piece a little larger than the pipe. If the cutting shows holes or cracks, the piece is cast aside. Then it is soaked in water for lifteen minutes and cut the rough shape with a knife. Then a hole is drilled through it, and it is turned with a half motion. After the turning the stem is inserted. It is smoothed off when dry, boiled in wax and polished, then it is ready to be sold.

The amber is worked with a chisel and turning wheel. The chisel is sharp and razor-like. A clumsy operator would cut his fingers off with it. An old operator takes the piece of amber in his hand and rounds it with the chisel, the forelinger of the left hand serving as a guide for the chisel to play. When it is rounded it is held against the face of a roughened wheel until it is turned to approximately the required size. Then it is put in the same turning wheel and a hole is bored

This is for the more common and cheaper amber stems, the same kind that are put in brierwood pipes, which sell for 50 and 75 cents. It does not seil for 50 and 75 cents. It does not take more than a quarter or a half-hour to finish one of these stems. A stem for a more costly pipe will take a day. The shortest time in which a good meerschaum pipe can be made is three days. That is for a plain pipe. If the pipe is to be carved that time has to be added. Workmen have spent months on carving one pipe.

The dust and chips from the amber and meerschaum are saved. The amber dust is melted and made into amberine. The meerschaum dust is chopped up and worked into a paste, from which the imitation meerschaum pipes are made. It is a common idea that real meerschaum can be told from imitation meerschaum by the fact that real meerschaum floats on water, but imitation meerschaum floats also. Imitation meerschaum can be made to color better than real eerschaum though it does not last so long and the color is likely to come in streaks. It is hard for a man who is not in the business to tell a real from an imitation meerschaum. The best quality of meerschaum fre-quently has air-holes and cracks in it.

The Honeymoon at Sea

A little conversation overheard one A little conversation overheard one evening seems to indicate that a sea voyage is not the happiest way of spending one's honeymoon: "Darling, are you better?" says first turtle dove. "No, dearest, worse! What is the use of having a doctor on board who can not cure seasickness, darling?" A significant pause. "It is absurd," says first turtle dove again. "But nificant pause. "It is absurd," says first turtle dove again. "But how foolish of you not to spend our honeymoon on shore, dearest! I am sure we shall never enjoy it here." Those people who may be unfortunate enough to have taken to artificial teeth should use exceeding circumspection when they go down to the sea in ships.

"What a splendid dentist seasickness is. I had the whole of my teeth pulled out at one vomit." said a patient to the doctor one morning. Several dentists have stated that it is by no means an uncommon occurrence of persons to finish a voyage in a practically tooth-less condition. Dr.Dutton is inclined to think that seasiekness is in many cases nothing more than a righteous retribu-tion following hard upon physiological sins. "A young man," he says "is about to go abroad. He, of course, must see every one and everything before leaving. So for a few weeks before his departure he lives a life of thoughtlessness, eats and drinks far more than is necessary, and lands on board suffering from catarrh of the stomach and congestion of the liver, and just in the proper condition to re-ceive a terrible recompense. The consequence is that instead of having an enjoyable and healthful passage he has a most miserable one, and it takes him the whole time to get himself right again. - London Hospital.

I confiscated the candy, with a view to doling it out in limited quantities from time to time, and persuaded him to deposit the dime in my pocket, telling him that it would be like putting money in the bank, that I would keep it for him, that any time when he really wanted it he could come to me and draw it out.

"I had no occasion to use any money for four or five days, when, on going to my pocketbook I was surprised to find that the supply of loose coin had noticeably diminished. At first I could not account for it, but after a little thought I concluded to question the small boy. Calling him to me I said "Paul, did you take your 10 cents out of mamma's pocketbook?"

"Ob, yes, mamma! I have tooken it out four times, and now I want it again!"—Boston Transcript.
